Stability in Volatility

If you are concerned about the volatility of the stock market, you're not alone. The extreme highs and lows of the stock market often lead investors towards safe-haven assets, like bullion. Historically, the Precious Metals market has an inverse relationship with the stock market, meaning that when stocks are up, bullion is down and vice versa.

This inverse correlation holds firm even when the stock market has crashed. Though Gold and Silver don't automatically rise with every fall in the stock market, history points to bullion as a hedge during stock market declines. Bullion allows you to be prepared for such catastrophes, providing you with a hedge against economic uncertainty.

Protect Your Investments

One of bullion's strongest benefits is that it can protect your investments. Periods of economic, monetary, or geopolitical crises can wreak havoc on your portfolio. Bullion can allow you to use your investments in Gold and Silver as both a defensive tool against uncertainty and an offensive profit when other investments fall.

Bullion is typically referred to in terms of defense because of its historical staying power; however, Gold and Silver can also be used as offensive strategies when building wealth. Gold and Silver offer substantial profit potential.

When the world experiences unrest, and the market falls into crisis – putting our economic, fiscal, and monetary systems at risk – bullion benefits. Investors look to Gold and Silver as safe-havens when fear strokes the market. The higher the apprehension, the higher the demand for safe-haven assets, and the higher the price for Gold and Silver goes. With elevated risks on multiple fronts, Gold and Silver can offer a low-risk, high-reward investment option.

Metals hold value over time and provide wealth that can be securely passed down to future generations.

Top Performing Asset Class

1

Ancient History

Gold has been a store of value for at least 3,000 years. Silver has been considered a precious element for over 6000 years and was first used as a currency in 700 B.C.

2

Modern Performance

Gold has been the second-best performing asset class since 2000, with annualized returns at nearly 8%, second only to real estate investment trusts with returns at 10%.

3

Inflation Protection

Because the global supply is relatively finite, Gold's purchasing power has historically remained stable during inflationary times.
